Loved by professionals

Some stains are harder to wash with dry clean detergent, depending on its property. Hydrosoluble stains, such as sweat, soy sauce, sauce, etc., are much more difficult to wash, so we would need to hand wash with drying after dry cleaning to wash those hydrosoluble stains. For the extra care it requires, these garments cost more to dry clean, but you can use drying to soak wash at home, easily and economically.

Tip from the professional...

Stains get fixed with time. Garments you can't send to the cleaners right away, like sweaty uniforms and sudden stains, can be washed easier and more gently to the clothes by soak washing with drying when you notice the stains.

Feature No. 1

"Soaking" washes delicate garments gently and cleanly!

Contains palm oil based surfactant and orange oil. Just soak and let it wash off stains. It causes much less damage to the fabric, and is recommended for washing highly fashionable garments and delicates.

Feature No. 2

Eco-friendly and gentle on the skin

The active ingredients, natural palm oil based surfactant and orange oil are eco-friendly and gentle on the skin, so you can handle it without worries. You can smell the scent of oranges wafting.

Feature No. 3

Use it for spot clean on collars and sleeves!

Apply Drying concentrate on the stain, then soak. You don't need separate detergent for spot clean and soak.

Feature No. 4

You don't need much to clean, nor do you need softeners for a fluffy finish!

You will get soft, fluffy finish even without using softeners. Wool clothes and underwear, even towels will have a fluffy, airy finish. Dissolve 15ml in 30L of water. You don't need much to clean well, so it is much more cost-effective than general laundry detergents.

A simple trick to protect your delicate clothes:

The important part is to treat your dry-clean clothes "without damaging them."

"Washing without damaging the fabric" is the key to longer lasting clothes.

"Soaking Detergent Drying" washes clothes by soak -> squeeze -> rinse -> squeeze. It rinses easily, so you don't need much time nor power to dewater, which causes less damage to the fabric. It is indeed a gentle washing detergent specially made for "soak washing" to protect the fabric.
